SEEK REASON FOR THE HOLDING UP OF BILLS

Number of Senators Get After McNichol and His Coterie

WAR MAY BE RESULT

Reason Will be Learned Why Progressive Measures Are Not Properly Reported

Harrisburg May 1—Sixteen senators, nine republicans and seven Democrats, among the latter being Senator Judson of Washington, petitioned the autocratic McNichol, who is holding up the progressive election bills in the senate committee, asking that they be reported out. This action was a show-down to McNichol that he was likely to be shy of enough votes to pass his nefarious vest pocket primary ballot amendment, which he and his followers were bent on doing in order to restore boss rule in state politics. Consequently the czar of the senate held over his bill until next Monday, while the senate adjourned after its customary two days' session, in spite of the accumulated bills that need attention. The senate has now but 46 active members, death and sickness having cut down the membership to that number; so that with 16 as a fighting nucleus, McNichol was afraid to let his vest pocket ballot bill go to the third reading.

Very little important work was accomplished by the legislature during the week. Some important bills were advanced in the house and some were passed finally by the senate. The most important bill to become a law was the mothers' pension bill which was signed by the governor. A number of unimportant bills were also approved by the governor. None of the important bills, however, were brought out by the senate committee. The latter body apparently being determined to circumvent the will of the people by holding the bills in committee until it is too late to consider them.

It is now talked among the legislators that June 6 will be set as a date for adjournment. If that is agreed upon, there is small hope for all of the important bills getting consideration, or passing in their original form.

HAVE GOOD SHOW AT THE PALACE

The vaudeville bill, which opens at the Palace Theatre tonight will be composed of Lowell B. Drew & Co. in a comedy playlet, Lindsay and Hewitt, in singing, dancing, talking and pianologues, and Annetta Julian, soubrette. All of these attractions come well recommended. They are among the best of the current attractions of the booking circuit, and each of the acts is considered a top tier in itself. In addition will be the regular motion picture service, with a change of films each night and the Pathe weekly Friday. The vaudeville will continue the rest of the week with a matinee Saturday.

INSTRUCTORS ARE ELECTED

Playgrounds Auxiliary Getting Things in Shape for Opening

Earl B. Amos, a teacher of a Fallfield township school during the term just closed, has been elected the head instructor for the Charleroi playgrounds for the coming season. Miss Bertha Charles, of Charleroi, has been named the instructor for the girls.

The election of instructors took place Wednesday evening at a meeting of the Playgrounds Auxiliary. Other matters pertaining to the opening of the playgrounds were talked over.

Men will be set to work at once putting them in the best of shape for the opening to take place on May 30. Within a short time the Playgrounds Auxiliary will be in shape and announce the list of speakers for the Memorial day opening exercises.

FUND FOR SUFFERERS INCREASES

Contributions Received Here for Work of Relief

MONONGAHELIANS BUSY

To date $173.02 as compared to Monongahela's $1,786.59 has been contributed by Charleroi people to the mine relief fund being raised for the benefit of the Cincinnati sufferers. Two dollars turned in Wednesday by Rev. E. G. Stanley and $35 today by the Charleroi Hotel Men's Association amount to be added to the general fund.

One thing that gave the Monongahela fund a start was the turning over of something like $300 that had been left as a balance from the Marianna relief fund.

Then each of the three Monongahela banks, Alexander and Co. the First National bank and the Monongahela City Trust company gave $100 to start the fund. All classes contributed. There were many $25 contributions.

Monongahela people realize the suffering that will result from the mine disaster of a week ago, the scenes at the morgue there having become somewhat familiar to them. The majority of the sufferers lived at Courtney or at Finleyville. Some of the foreign women with their children are to be sent back to their native land, where friends will laid them.

INQUEST PROBABLE WEEK AFTER NEXT

Not Able to Get Ready Until Then the Latest

News Learned of the Recent Cincinnati Mine Horror

Not until week after next will affairs be in such shape that a coroner's inquest can be held to determine the cause of the recent Cincinnati mine explosion, according to news received today. It was thought that an inquest could be arranged for next week, but the latest information indicates that such will be impossible.

Coroner James T. Heffran and his party of county and miner's officials have been in the wrecked mine twice and have pretty thoroughly explored it. Others however are yet to explore and prepare their report. In order to summon all the witnesses that are needed and to get in perfect shape for the inquest several days will be required.

"It was small wonder two victims were not identified," said a member of the coroner's jury this morning. "Between them there was only one shoe and a sock and their bodies were in horrible shape."

LARGE CROWD AT OPENING OF GAME PLAYED

Many Visit Store and Parlor of P. Calistri on McKean Avenue

Hundreds visited the store and ice cream parlor of P. Calistri on Wednesday afternoon and evening, when the spring opening was held. Renovated throughout and decorated effectively for the occasion the store presented an almost dazzling appearance.

Mr. Calistri spent $5,000 building an addition to his bakery and store building, in installing the latest kind of machinery and in generally improving the store facilities. Particular attention was paid to the matter of beautifying the interior. Among the changes was to install a new front. A new corner entrance was put in with a large display window on McKean avenue and a slightly smaller one on Fourth street.

During both the afternoon and evening Wheeler's Orchestra furnished music. As every visitor entered he or she was presented with a carnation as a souvenir and upon going out each was given another souvenir in the shape of an ice cream cake.

The baking machinery that has been installed by Mr. Calistri is of a design that will enable him to compete with the largest bakers in the Monongahela valley. He will be prepared to handle all kinds of trade. His ice cream manufacturing machinery is also of the latest design, and of a make not to be found anywhere this side of Pittsburgh.

WEDDED IN WEST MIDDLESEX; HERE FOR HONEYMOON

On their wedding tour Mr. and Mrs. John Walker, of West Middlesex will be here this afternoon to visit the latter's sister, Mrs. Harry E. Price. They were married Wednesday afternoon at West Middlesex. The bride was formerly Miss Alma Williams. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Williams, formerly of Charleroi.

GRADING STARTED FOR STREET RAILWAYS LINE

CARPENTERS NOT WORKING

Echo of Pittsburg Strike Heard Along the Monongahela Valley

Many carpenters in a number of Monongahela valley towns are on strike, their demands being an increase in wages of 50 cents a day. A strike understood to have been started at Pittsburg is said to be settled.

Charleroi union carpenters are not working, though it was stated this morning that employers had agreed to the increase from $3.50 to $4.00. Where the kick comes in is the refusal of the employers to sign an agreement presented by the carpenters. At least that is the present status of the affair, according to the story told the Mail this morning.

At Monongahela practically all the outside men of the Stevens Bros., Monongahela Saw and Planing mill and Yohe Bros., are off work.

ASCENSION DAY TO BE OBSERVED

Knights Templar to Hear Sermon by Rev. J. T. Hackett

WILL MARCH TO CHURCH

Ascension day will be observed this evening by McKean Commandery, No. 80, Knights Templar. Rev. J. T. Hackett, pastor of the First Presbyterian church will preach the sermon. As is customary the knights, plumed and uniformed, will march to the church.

The line of parade will extend over portions of McKean avenue, Fallowfield avenue and Washington avenue, starting from the Masonic hall on Fifth street and McKean avenue. The Knights Templar will be led by a band.

The regular ascension day program will be carried out. Miss Leila Orange will be the organist. She will render an organ prelude after the seating of the knights. A responsive reading, and the lord's prayer will follow. The choir will render an anthem and the ascension day psalm will be given, to be followed by another anthem. With the knights standing the Apostles' Creed will be repeated and the Ascension day collect read, to be followed by the "Gloria Patria" by the choir. "Onward Christian Soldiers," the Templar hymn will be sung preceding the sermon.

Rev. Hackett will preach on the theme "As Far as Bethany." The usual closing exercises are programmed.

Brownsville Contractors Get Contract For West Side Work

BEGIN AT THE CENTER

Prepare to Continue Work Both Towards Bentleyville and Charleroi

Grading has been started on a two-mile stretch of the surveyed route of the West Side Electric Street Railway company's line to be built between Charleroi and Bentleyville. The Parsons Construction company of Brownsville has the contract for two miles of the work, with a time limit of 90 days in which to finish. Track will be laid by the company itself.

Approximately 30,000 square yards of material will have to be removed, and the grading will not be easy. The Parsons Construction company has been advertising for men and teams to put to work at the scene of the grading.

With the two miles completed, there will be left four miles to finish, before the line is completed between Charleroi and Bentleyville. Three miles have been finished at the other end. The Parsons Construction company is beginning at the center of the route and continuing in both directions the extent of distance their contract calls for. On the Bentleyville end the line has been practically finished from Weaver Station to and through Bentleyville.

MRS. BOORTMAS DIES AT HOME IN NORTH CHARLEROI

Mrs. Elizabeth Boortmas, aged 55 years, died after an illness of about three years at her home in North Charleroi Wednesday evening at about 5:30 o'clock from heart trouble. Five sons and three daughters survive. Funeral services will be conducted at the late home on Lock Hill at 2 o'clock on Friday afternoon. Rev. John R. Burton will probably conduct the services. Interment will be in the Charleroi cemetery.

WHERE THE LAW IS LAME.

While intense public interest is manifested in the forthcoming coroner's inquest to inquire into the cause of the disastrous Cincinnati
mine explosion it seems to be a foregone conclusion in the minds of many people that the blame will ultimately
be fixed upon someone of the dead employees of the company, which will relieve the latter corporation from responsibility. If this is done the law as now constituted cannot exact any penalty from the corporation.

This is where the law is lame.
Miners and subordinate mine officials
with one accord state emphatically
that the action of the mine foreman
and bosses generally is dominated by the policy of the company. The minor official who is too particular as to safety, and compels the company to rigidly obey the law is quite apt to be relieved of his job. The great cry of all the coal corporations is for production and to keep expenses down.
The larger a mine becomes, and the more extensive is its production, in just such proportion do the dangers increase. In every mine, it is stated, dozens of small details pertaining to safety are ignored, and the local superintendent who would insist on a strict observance of everything would
more than likely be set down as not working for the "interests of the company." The local superintendent knows this, and so do all his subordinates. Small infractions are ignored until there comes a big disaster. The man whom the company holds responsible for the enforcement of the mining regulations invariably
is killed, and there the blame ends.

When the law holds the coal companies personally responsible for all disasters, there will not be so many of them. If a local superintendent can feel assured that if he withdraws
all the men from a mine when gas
or danger is detected and keeps them out until the mine is safe again, without censure for interfering with the production, there would seldom be any great loss of life in explosions if the explosions occurred at all. In most cases the great disaster is due to the policy of the companies in giving their output more consideration than the safety of their men.

EAT MUTTON

The manager of the local branch of the Cudahy Meat Packing company
at Chicago, hands in the following, which was gleaned from the St. Paul Live Stock Journal this week, and
which is particularly timely just now,
in view of the high price of beef and
the scarcity of cattle:

"Federal inspection of the many million of sheep and lambs received at the various marketing centers last year failed to disclose a single case
of tuberculosis, a circumstance which constitutes a tremendous argument
in favor of the increased use of this class of stock as a source of meat supply for the tables of American homes. In these days when emphasis is being placed most strongly upon
the desirability of pure food products
and their necessity to the preservation and betterment of the national health, none should overlook mutton as affording an opportunity to keep the meat portion of the bill of fare up to the highest standards of healthfulness.

"With the price of beef and pork forced to high levels by the scarcity
of cattle and hogs there is reason to expect an increased consumption of mutton in American homes. Sheep growers of this country the past few years have been bending their efforts toward improving the quality of their finished product with the result that today American mutton is as good as
that produced anywhere by the ultimate consumers of the country."

ELECTRIC SPARKS

Some shows are so bad they are good.

If Japan is so blamed anxious to get in a war Mexico could accommodate her, and not even depart from fashion, tradition or anything else.

Washington and Jefferson college is not so noted as it was before the Pittsburg Pirates licked its baseball team.

Abe Martin says: "Next to a comic opory their hairet anything as funny as a city administration."

While peevish things are being remembered against the Japs, it might be recalled that they never thanked us for teaching them how to play baseball.

Never mind! The college orator will provide a way out of the numerous difficulties. He isn't afraid of thirteen thirteens.

A fool may be born every minute, but most of us go along for years before attracting much attention.

The senate is claimed to still be reactionary. That fact doesn't seem very new but is given as a matter of weekly record.

Montenegro seems to be in the position of the little man told of who ordinarily weighed 120 pounds, but when mad weighed a ton.

It rather begins to appear as though the powers were more afraid of possibilities than they are of probabilities in the Montenegrin situation.

North Charleroi is going to see that it isn't forgotten entirely. And that the truth that nothing stirs a town like a carnival.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

"It requires only a cursory glance
at the bills that are before the legislature to convince one that a constitutional revision is an absolute necessity in this state, said a citizen
who keeps close tab on state affairs:
"This is shown by the narrow limits
in which municipalities, townships, counties, and even the courts are
confined in the matter of regulation.
None of these bodies have the power
under the constitution to act independently and meet any unforeseen emergency in a practical and common-sense manner.

"For instance, the press dispatches this morning mentions a bill to regulate the use of vehicles other than automobiles on public highways." Why in the name of commonsense should such a bill be necessary, when the state maintains a highway department? You don't hear of railroad supervisors sending into the general offices for an order as to how a section gang shall push a repair truck on the tracks or where the gang shall sit when the men eat their dinners, or any other little petty detail which an official in charge is capable of deciding off hand.

"So far as state constitution is concerned it makes us spend nearly half our revenues passing laws to regulate petty details, which the executive of a department or local officials should decide and look after.
There would be just as much sense in passing laws regulating the sewing
of a suspender button; fixing May 15 as the date of donning straw hats; prohibiting the wearing of gulluses
and a belt at the same time by men; regulating the widths of women's skirts; prohibiting the use of sausage in months that do not contain the letter R. Hundreds of laws are passed at every session of the legislature regulating details that ought to come under the jurisdiction of a court, state department, county or municipal officials.

"A big corporation does not concern itself with petty details but maintains departments and officials
capable of meeting all such emergencies and deciding them on the spot.
When government is put on a business basis and executed for the exclusive well being of its people, we will eliminate all this foolishness.
That's why we need a new constitution—one that will permit the state to do business on business principles."

Brown, the right gardener that Phillips is trying out, is showing wonderful form. During the first regular-yanigan game Phillips sta-field. He covered himself with all kinds of glory in the field and capped the climax by clouting out the only extra base hit of the day. Brown played with Pittsburg a short time in the United States league. Phillips had a good opinion of Brown before he signed him. His wisdom of choice is being proved. Score:

Eating in the Fifth Act of Life.

The advice which Sydney Smith gave
to Lord Murray on the subject of diet was probably sound. "If you wish for anything like happiness in the fifth act
of life," he wrote, "eat and drink one-half of what you could eat and drink.
Did I ever tell you my calculations about eating and drinking? Having ascertained the weight of what I could live upon so as to preserve health and strength, and what I did live upon, I found that between ten
and seventy years of age I had eaten
and drunk forty-four horse wagon loads of meat and drink more than
would have preserved me in life and health. The value of this mass of nourishment I considered to be worth $7,000. It occurred to me that I must be very fortunate to have starved to death fully 100 persons. This is a frightful calculation, but irresistibly true."

How a Woman Saved Nice.

It happened in August, 1543, and is related by Mrs. Walter Tibbels in "Cities Seen in East and West." Nice then under the dukes of Savoy, was being besieged by Francis I. and Barbarossa.

Catherine Scurione was a washerwoman whose creed was laborare est orare. She carried food to the defenders on the ramparts still left. The Turks had put up a scaling ladder
the captain led his party, and they were actually on the parapet. She rushed at the Turkish officer, wrenched the flag he was carrying from him, beat him back with the butt end and "knew down the ladder on top of all then cutting the soldiers, they threw open a postern made a sortie and drove the Turks to the shore.

The Kangaroo at Bay.

When pursued the kangaroo, if possible, directs his flight toward the river. If he reaches it he enters and thanks to his great height is able to go on foot to a depth where the dogs are obliged to swim. There he plants himself on his two hind legs and his
tail, and, up to his shoulders in the water, he waits the attack of the dogs.
With his fore paws he seizes by the head the first dog that approaches him
and, as he is more solidly balanced
than his assailant, he holds the dog's nose under water as long as he can.
Unless a second dog speedily comes to the rescue the first one is sure to be drowned. If a companion arrives and by his attacks on the kangaroo manages to set the captive free the half-drowned brute is glad to regain the shore as quickly as possible. In this way a strong and courageous male kangaroo will hold his own against twenty or thirty dogs, drowning some
and frightening others, and the hunter
is obliged to intervene with a bullet.

Leach and Live Long.

It has been aptly said that there is not the remotest corner of the inlet of
the minute blood vessels of the human body that does not feel some wavelet
from the convulsions occasioned by good hearty laughter. The life principle of the central man is shaken to its innermost depths, sending new tides of life and strength to the surface, thus materially tending to insure good health to the persons who indulge therein. The blood moves more rapidly and conveys a different impression to all the organs of the body as it visits
them on that particular mystic journey when the man is laughing from that conveyed at other times. For this reason every good, hearty laugh in this world is a person indulges tends to lengthen his life, conveying as it does new and distinct stimulus to the vital forces.

What Wellington Was Doing.

When Sir John Steel, the sculptor had the iron Duke sitting for a statue
he tried to induce him to look warlike.
All his efforts were in vain, however,
for Wellington seemed, judging by his face, never to have heard of Waterloo or Talavera. At last Sir John lost his patience. "As I am going to make this statue of your grace," he exclaimed,
"can you not tell me what you were doing before say, the battle of Salamanca? Were you not galloping about the field, cheering on your men to deeds of valor by words and action?"
"Bah!" said the duke in evident scorn. "If you really want to model
me as I was on the morning of Salamanca, then do me crawling along a ditch on my stomach with a telescope
in my hand!"

Historic Old Hotel.

The Golden Kreuz (Golden Cross) at Regensburg (Ratisbon), in Bavaria, is the oldest hotel in Europe. King Ferdinand I. halted at it on his way to his coronation in 1551, and no other hotel in Europe possesses records of such great antiquity as the Golden Kreuz at Ratisbon does or can boast of having had so many royal visitors as have enjoyed its hospitality. The existing visitors' books, which date from 1819, contain the names of more than 300 Imperial, royal and princely personages. The room is shown where in 1865 the late Prince Bismarck, at that time Prussian premier, slept when he came with his sovereign to hold the conference which was the last attempt to prevent war between Austria and Prussia. The negotiations were held in the "small hall" of the hotel under the presidency of King William of Prussia. The host is equally proud of the autographs of Schiller and other men of letters which he possesses.
The author of "William Tell" wrote the words "Und eine heimath ist es" ("It is indeed a home") in memory of his stay there, and no landlord could wish for a better advertisement.—Lon-

FARMER'S WIFE ALMOST A WRECK

Westwood, Md.—“I am a farmer's wife and do most of my own work when I am able. I had nervous spells, female weakness and terrible bearing down pains every month. I also suffered much with my right side. The pain started in my back and extended around my right side, and the doctor told me it was organic inflammation. I was sick every three weeks and had to stay in bed from two to four days.

“It is with great pleasure I tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I have followed your directions as near as possible, and feel much better than I have felt for years. When I wrote you before I was almost a wreck. You can publish this letter if you like. It may help to strengthen the faith of some poor suffering woman.”—Mrs. JOHN F. RICHARDS, Westwood, Maryland.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

SADDLE MAKING IN MEXICO.

Entire Families Often Take Part in the Home Industry.

The making of saddles, while in the aggregate an important local Mexican industry, is purely a home affair, the artisans for the most part working independently in their own homes and often pressing the entire family into service. The manager of the largest wholesale and retail dealers in saddles in Mexico City says that all the saddles which they handle are made locally at home by hand, and he estimates that more than 100 families in the city are similarly employed.

Many of these handmade saddles are handsomely carved and most creditable in appearance, although the leather as a rule is far inferior to that used in American saddles. It is the practice of retailers to furnish the trees, leather and fittings of all kinds to the workmen and pay them for their actual labor. The labor is the cheapest item entering into saddle construction, many entire families being satisfied with a wage of 50 cents to $1 American currency per day.

The saddletrees used for the better grade of saddle are imported from the state of Colima, the cheaper grade of saddles using a tree of local make. No American saddles or saddletrees are carried in stock by local merchants, but are ordered from time to time according to the specifications of the individual purchaser.—Trade and Consular Reports.

A Giant Peppys Saw.

King James I. had a gigantic porter eight feet six inches in height, but he was not perfect, being round shouldered, knockkneed and lame in one foot. Of a similar height was Charles Munster, a yeoman of the Hanoverian guard who died in 1676, and seven years before there was being exhibited in London a Dutchman eight feet nine inches high whom in Peppys' diary we find the following entry on Aug. 15, 1680: “Went to Charing Cross to see the great Dutchman. I did walk under his arm with my hat on and could not reach his chin with the tips of my fingers.”

Happiness.

If you cannot be happy in one way, be in another, and this facility of disposition wants but little aid from philosophy, for health and good humor are almost the whole affair. Many run about after felicity, like an absent-minded man hunting for his hat while it is in his hand or on his head.

The London Bobby.

In humor, in urbanity, as in perfect control of his district, the London policeman is the nearest possible approach to perfection. To the stranger he seems the person of all the Londoners. The shop people in London are, in the average, both stupid and rude; the supposedly well bred people in Hyde park, if a hapless vagabond were to come to them for information, would be either insolent or unhelpful; the policeman, however, seems invariably polite, wonderfully well informed and furnished with English that is not nearly so atrociously cockney as that of those who fancy themselves his betters.—“Vagabond Jo rages, the Human Comedy of Home and Abroad” by Perceval Bodley.

The Hallmark.

“Isn't that Marjorie Mincer, the sobrette star?”
“Yes.”
“But she hasn't a particle of makeup on her face.”
“She doesn't wear paint and powder on the street any more for fear she might be mistaken for a society leader.”—Life.

Undetermined Joke.

“There's a crook gone to the island for ten days that I'll be looking for when he comes out,” remarked a policeman on an east side post.

“Why?”

“Well, listen. I caught him trying a door on my beat the other night and took him in. He started to be nasty about it, and I swung my stick at him. Before I could land him one on the head he shouts out to me:

“Don't hit me! Look out! There's a dynamite stick in me pocket!”

“I stopped quick enough, all right, for, you see, I get all the blowing up I need at the station now and again. But listen. When that chap was searched at the station there wasn't a sign of dynamite on him.

“Who was the joke on? Never mind that. The question is, who will the joke be on? Just wait.”—New York Globe.

His Method With Tips.

The president of a certain line of coastwise steamers has a novel system of handling the tip evil. He sends on each of his boats every once and so often a detective, who has instructions to go into the dining room, order a large and elaborate repeat and hand the waiter a tip of ten cents. If the waiter is silent or surly after receiving this small gratuity his number is promptly reported. It is said that in no place in the world can such a number of smiling waiters be found as in the dining saloons of this particular steamship line.—New York Tribune.

Resting a Model.

Adolphe Menzel, the German painter, at one time was engaged on a work of mural decoration and kept a man posed in an exceedingly fatiguing position on a scaffold for two hours. The great painter worked away, heedless of his model's discomfort. Finally the victim called down, "Herr Professor, how about the recess?"

"Certainly, my dear sir. Come down right away and you shall have your recess."

As the model was descending from the scaffolding his limbs assumed a position which was one for which the artist had long been looking.

"Stop!" Menzel thundered. "Hold! Ah, fine! Keep that while I make a little sketch of it!"

The artist drew vigorously for half an hour, at the end of which he called out imperatively: "There, that will do for now. Get up on the scaffold again. We have had our recess."

POPPING CORN.

Why the Heat Literally Turns the Grains Inside Out.

A grain of popcorn is filled with tightly packed starch grains. The interior of the grain is divided into a large number of cells, each of which may be likened to a tiny box, the walls whereof are sufficiently strong to withstand considerable pressure from within. Upon the application of heat the moisture present in each little box is converted into steam that finally escapes by explosion.

To obtain a satisfactory popping there is required a very high degree of heat. This causes the greater part of the cells to explode simultaneously. The grain of corn then literally turns inside out and is transformed into a relatively large mass of snow white starch.

If corn be old and dry it will not pop satisfactorily. A few cells near the center of the grain may burst, but the general result will be unsatisfactory. At the base of the kernels, where they are attached to the cob, the cells appear to be dried, and it has been observed that these cells are seldom broken in the popping.

Practically all the popcorn raised for market in this country comes from New England. Great quantities of it are popped, buttered and packed for sale all over the United States.—Harper's Weekly.

PINEAPPLE PLANTS.

They Do Not Die After Fruiting, but Reproduce Themselves.

Pineapples do not grow on trees. Imagine a plant four feet in extreme height from the ground to the tip of leaves, a single stalk at the surface, but dividing at once into swordlike blades or leaves, fifteen in number, from the center of which appears a stiff, upright stem, at the top of which is the fruit. This stem is short, and the crown of the fruit when fully grown is a foot or more below the points of the leaves.

At the end of a year and a half from planting each plant produces a single fruit, even as a cabbage plant produces a single head. But the pineapple does not die after fruiting once. Down on the stem below the fruit and among the long, narrow leaves a sucker appears. If allowed to remain this will soon become the head of the plant, and within another year it will yield another fruit. This process may go on for a term of years. In the meantime, however, other suckers will make their appearance.

These are broken off, and when stuck into the ground they put out roots and become other plants. Thus a single pineapple plant may produce a dozen or more others while it is yielding fruit from year to year.

Boy Invents Engine.

Earle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. V. Amos of Beallsville has invented an engine which he expects to have patented in the near future. Young Amos made the entire engine himself, casting the fly-wheel and other parts. The engine will propel the wheel forward or reverse without any mechanical changes except the steam rod. He has made several tests on the miniature engine and it has proven very satisfactory.

Luellen, who is in charge of the improvements on the National pike through Beallsville, reports that work will be commenced in a few days on the road near Brownsville and that the work will be started about the same time from near Washington. A silver cup was awarded the Peters township team, this cup to be permanently awarded the team scoring the greatest number of points at three successive meets. Last year Bethel won.

Superintendent Has Record.

E. G. Cole, Beallsville constable and assessor, has a record as superintendent of the Beallsville cemetery which will be hard to equal. Mr. Cole has served over 20 years in the capacity and keeps the cemetery in such fine shape that people from a distance who visit it remark that it is as well kept as the large cemeteries in cities. Mr. Cole is kept busy the greater part of the summer looking after the graveyard.

Must Build Sewage Plant.

Unless State Health Commissioner Samuel G. Dixon recedes from his position, Canonsburg will be compelled to expend $40,000 or more this year in the erection of a sewage disposal plant. Such a plant was ordered constructed two years ago but the town council took no action further than to have plans prepared. These were approved and there the matter rested. Recently Dr. Dixon sent a communication to Canonsburg which caused the councilmen to sit up and take notice. An effort is being made to have the state health department reconsider its demand, but as yet no definite word has been received from Harrisburg.

Rounds Up Quartet

Chief of Police Albright rounded up a quartet, three men and one woman at a shack on First street this morning. Evidently they had spent the entire night there. They were lodged in the lockup. The men gave their names as Lon Taylor, James Givens and Albert Hall, and the woman as Mrs. John Bowens.

MADE THE CLERKS WORK.

A Senator Wanted Information and Found a Way to Get It.

"Congress makes lots of unnecessary trouble for the government clerks," said a veteran employee, "but the worst case I know of occurred some years ago. A certain senator asked the comptroller of the currency to tell him how much stock a certain man had in a national bank. He was informed that such information was regarded as confidential and could not be given out.

"We'll see about that," said the senator, who was plainly disappointed and displeased.

"Several days later he secured the passage of a resolution calling upon the secretary of the treasury to furnish the senate with the names and holdings of the stockholders in all the national banks in the country. He really wanted to know only the interest of one man in a bank, but he knew that he couldn't get a resolution of that kind through the senate, so he included the stockholders in all national banks.

"It took the entire force of the comptroller's office several weeks to prepare the information, and when it reached the senate nobody paid any attention to it except the author of the resolution, and he merely looked at the mass of papers only long enough to see about the man he was after and then tossed the papers aside. It was an immense lot of work for nothing."—Washington Star.

ORIGIN OF CINDERELLA.

The Dainty Footed Damsel Who Became a King's Wife.

It has been said, "Not one girl in a thousand knows the origin of the friend of her childhood, Cinderella."

Her real name was Rhodope, and she was a beautiful Egyptian maiden who lived 670 years before the common era and during the reign of one of the twelve kings of Egypt. One day Rhodope ventured to bathe in a clear stream near her home, leaving her shoes, which were very small, lying on a bank. An eagle, passing above, caught sight of the little sandals and, mistaking them for a toothsome tidbit, pounced down and carried off one in his beak.

The bird unwittingly played the part of fairy godmother, for, flying over Memphis, where the king was dispensing justice, it let the shoe fall directly at the king's feet. Its size, beauty and daintiness immediately attracted the royal eye, and the king determined to know the wearer of so cunning a shoe.

Messengers were sent through all the kingdom in search of the foot that it would fit. Rhodope was finally discovered, the shoe placed on her foot, and she was carried in triumph to Memphis, where she became the queen of King Psammethicus.

MAN'S ARTERIES.

And Some of the Causes That Tend to Make Them Harden.

"A man is as old as his arteries" is a common saying among physicians, which has come to be taken up by their patients. Dr. Herbert C. Clapp of Boston in the New York Medical Record comes forward with an article declaring that worry is a common cause of arteriosclerosis, the hardening of the arteries is not infrequently considered as one of the customary and proper accompaniments of a ripe old age—sometimes even of middle life—it is not universally so and that even at fourscore years, as proved by autopsies, the arteries have been found to be perfectly sound. He cites the case of the champion old man, Thomas Parr of England, who died at the advanced age of 152 and whose arteries were found by Harvey—who discovered the circulation of the blood—on examination after death to be perfectly sound.

Dr. Clapp says that within certain limits the arteries do not burden because they are old, but are old because they are diseased. Among causes for arteriosclerosis he gives overeating, excessive muscular strain and excessive brain work. Worry produces functional disturbances and undue blood pressure. This brings with it arteriosclerosis. It holds that most worries are induced in without an adequate reason, therefore, and cites the following quotation: "I am an old man and have had many troubles, but most of them never happened."

Why Not?

Lord Fewscends—Yass, I confess I came to your blawsted country, Goncherknow, to marry a wlich American girl, but I haven't found one yet. Miss Harlem—Why don't you advertise, "Wanted—a wush girl?"—Woman's Home Companion.

"Re-enforced."

After all the efforts of the scientists it still remains generally conceded that the only way to keep a middle aged man's hair from falling out is to cover his head with concrete.—Galveston News.

Quite Deaf.

When a defendant in Edgware police court said that he wished to call his mother as a witness the court officer observed that she had been in court all the time and had heard the evidence.

The Mother (from the rear of the court)—Yes, but I'm stone deaf and can't hear a word. The Clerk (in a whisper)—Quite deaf? The Mother—Yes.

Trouble and a Camera in Cairo.

I perceived that it would be impossible to photograph any of the bazaars of Cairo without very efficient help. My great good fortune I ran across an excellent druggist a couple of hours later. He could speak English well and his terms were reasonable. I explained to him what I wanted to do, and he said he could manage it, so I promptly engaged him, and the following afternoon found me again at the bazaars. Here, in spite of almost insuperable difficulties, I secured several good photographs. No sooner had I taken my camera out of its case than I was literally hemmed in by a crowd of curious people, and before the photograph could be taken these had to be kept back and the traffic stopped on either side of the subject being photographed. The difficulties involved may possibly be imagined, certainly not described. Once a native policeman came to my aid, thrashing tight and left with a rope end. The ubiquitous small boy, who wears nothing but an abbreviated cotton gown, went off howling. When the photograph had been taken, every body wanted bakshesh, and my druggist man had to fight off all those not entitled to a fee. I was glad to pay the men who frequently volunteered to keep the crowds back.—Christian Herald.

Beauty of Colonial Gateposts.

Perhaps no other feature adds more to the seclusion and dignity of a home than well designed entrance gateposts. The meeting point of house and grounds always presents a difficult problem, even in the best suburban architecture. Shrubbery often mitigates this unavoidable intersection, but the old fashioned white picket fence full of interesting detail and backed up by hedges, solved the problem most satisfactorily. Yet this best solution must be used with discretion. On suburban streets broken up into many small lots, there should be an agreement on the part of several neighbors to put up the same sort of fence; otherwise the different heights and shapes of the pickets would be too disturbing to add any beauty to the houses. In other words, a good picket fence demands a certain amount of continuity to do it justice. In the gateposts, however, a great variety could be displayed, and where there is a group of little colonial houses, or even only colonial doorways, the famous old gateposts of Salem offer a wealth of suggestion.—Country Life in America.

LEGENDS ABOUT DEW.

Curious Beliefs as to Its Origin and Varied Powers.

In many places dew is looked upon as tears of the angels and of the souls in purgatory shed on account of the sins of human beings upon earth, and dew is collected to be used to cure certain diseases, especially those of the eyes, freckles, baldness, cramps, open wounds and cuts, rheumatism, skin diseases, burns, etc.

The virtues of dew as a beauty wash are also well known, remarks the Journal of Religious Psychology. One legend tells how by licking the dew off the plants on a certain morning when all the birds drink it one can learn their language.

Another folk belief is that "naked or with only their shirts on the witches at the time of the new moon collect the dew from the grass with bark sleeves. By this means they deprive of their milk the cows that have been pastured on the grass, and as soon as their sleeves are full of dew they know that their pots at home are full of milk."

The Polish people of Wologrowitz call the dew on which the birds are supposed to feed patasie misko—i. e., "birds' milk."

Catching a Wolf Alive.

One of the favorite sports of a Polish country gentleman is to capture a wolf alive. A wolf being driven into the open, the well mounted horseman pursues it, armed only with a long whip and some rope. The wolf after a time tries to take rest, but the rider forces it on with his whip till, after repeated attempts at rest, it sinks exhausted. The rider then springs from his horse, jumps astride the wolf and, holding it by the ears, secures it with the rope. Most men require the assistance of a mounted companion, who ties the wolf while the other holds its ears with both hands, and in this way the capture is comparatively easy, but to do it single handed is a difficult feat. Nasty bites and even dangerous wounds result should the hunter have miscalculated the strength of the animal. No one, however, is considered a perfect sportsman till he has done this, yet many never succeed.

Information Not Needed.

A middle aged woman went into a shop and without hesitation made straight for the crape counter. The girl who handled this funeral material was extremely affable.

"We have a large stock of crapes," she explained. "Let me show you some new French goods, very popular at this time for every kind of mourning and destined to express every degree of grief. If you will tell me for whom you are in mourning I can fix you out in exactly the right thing."

"Husband," replied the customer briefly.

"In that case," said the girl graciously, "I can tell you just what"—"Young lady," interrupted the older woman angrily, "you needn't bother yourself. This is the fourth husband I've buried, and I know all about it."—St. Paul Dispatch.

Reason Will be Learned Why Progressive Measures Are Not Properly Reported

Harrisburg May 1.—Sixteen senators, nine republicans and seven Democrats, among the latter being Senator Judson of Washington, petitioned the autocratic McNichol, who is holding up the progressive election bills in the senate committee, asking that they be reported out. This action was a show-down to McNichol that he was likely to be shy of enough votes to pass his nefarious vest pocket primary ballot amendment, which he and his followers were bent on doing in order to restore boss rule in state politics. Consequently the czar of the senate held over his bill until next Monday, while the senate adjourned after its customary two days' session, in spite of the accumulated bills that need attention. The senate has now but 46 active members, death and sickness having cut down the membership to that number; so that with 16 as a fighting nucleus, McNichol was afraid to let his vest pocket ballot bill go to the third reading.

Very little important work was accomplished by the legislature during the week. Some important bills were advanced in the house and some were passed finally by the senate. The most important bill to become a law was the mothers' pension bill which was signed by the governor. A number of unimportant bills were also approved by the governor. None of the important bills, however, were brought out by the senate committee. The latter body apparently being determined to circumvent the will of the people by holding the bills in committee until it is too late to consider them.

It is now talked among the legislators that June 6 will be set as a date for adjournment. If that is agreed upon, there is small hope for all of the important bills getting consideration, or passing in their original form.

HAVE GOOD SHOW AT THE PALACE

The vaudeville bill, which opens at the Palace Theatre tonight will be composed of Lowell B. Drew & Co. in a comedy playlet, Lindsay and Hewitt, in singing, dancing, talking and pianologues, and Annetta Julian, comedienne. All of these attractions come well recommended. They are among the best of the current attractions of the booking circuit, and each of the acts is considered a top-tier in itself. In addition will be the regular motion picture service, with a change of films each night and the Pathe weekly Friday. The vaudeville will continue the rest of the week with a matinee Saturday.

Playgrounds Auxiliary Getting Things in Shape for Opening

Earl B. Amos, a teacher of a Fallowfield township school during the term just closed, has been elected the head instructor for the Charleroi playgrounds for the coming season. Miss Bertha Charles, of Charleroi, has been named the instructor for the girls.

The election of instructors took place Wednesday evening at a meeting of the Playgrounds Auxiliary. Other matters pertaining to the opening of the playgrounds were talked over.

Men will be set to work at once putting them in the best of shape for the opening to take place on May 30. Within a short time the Playgrounds Auxiliary will be in shape and announce the list of speakers for the Memorial day opening exercises.

Relief

MONONGAHELIANS BUSY

To date $170.62 as compared to Monongahela's $1,786.59 has been contributed by Charleroi people to the mine relief fund being raised for the benefit of the Cincinnati sufferers. Two dollars turned in Wednesday by Rev. E. G. Stanley and $35 today by the Charleroi Hotel Men's Association amount to be added to the general fund.

One thing that gave the Monongahela fund a start was the turning over of something like $300 that had been left as a balance from the Marianna relief fund.

There each of the three Monongahela banks, Alexander and Co. the First National bank and the Monongahela City Trust company gave $100 to start the fund. All classes contributed. There were many $25 contributions.

Monongahela people realize the suffering that will result from the mine disaster of a week ago, the scenes at the morgue there having become somewhat familiar to them. The majority of the sufferers lived at Courtney or at Finleyville. Some of the foreign women with their children are to be sent back to their native land, where friends will aid them.

Not Able to Get Ready Until Then the Latest

Not until week after next will affairs be in such shape that a coroner's inquest can be held to determine the cause of the Cincinnati mine explosion, according to news received today. It was thought that an inquest could be arranged for next week, but the latest information indicates that such will be impossible. Coroner James T. Heffran and his party of county and miner's officials have been in the wrecked mine twice and have pretty thoroughly explored it.

Others however are yet to explore and prepare their report. In order to summon all the witnesses that are needed and to get in perfect shape for the inquest several days will be required. "It was small wonder two victims were not identified," said a member of the coroner's jury this morning. "Between them there was only one shoe and a sock and their bodies were in horrible shape."

LARGE CROWD AT OPENING SEVEN INNINGS OF GAME PLAYED

Avenue
Regulars and Yanigans Engage in Struggle at Baseball Park

Hundreds visited the store and ice cream parlor of P. Calistri on Wednesday afternoon and evening, when the spring opening was held. Renovated throughout and decorated effectively for the occasion the store presented an almost dazzling appearance.

Mr. Calistri spent $6,000 building an addition to his bakery and store building, in installing the latest kind of machinery and in generally improving the store facilities. Particular attention was paid to the matter of beautifying the interior. Among the changes was to install a new front. A new corner entrance was put in with a large display window on McKean avenue and a slightly smaller one on Fourth street.

During both the afternoon and evening Wheeler's Orchestra furnished music. As every visitor entered he or she was presented with a carnation as a souvenir and upon going out each was given another souvenir in the shape of an ice cream cake.

The baking machinery that has been installed by Mr. Calistri is of a design that will enable him to compete with the largest bakers in the Monongahela valley. He will be prepared to handle all kinds of trade. His ice cream manufacturing machinery is also of the latest design, and of a make not to be found anywhere this side of Pittsburgh.

Echo of Pittsburg Strike
Heard Along the Monongahela Valley

Many carpenters in a number of Monongahela valley towns are on strike, their demands being an increase in wages of 50 cents a day. A strike understood to have been started at Pittsburg is said to be settled.

Charleroi union carpenters are not working, though it was stated this morning that employers had agreed to the increase from $3.50 to $4.00. Where the kick comes in is the refusal of the employers to sign an agreement presented by the carpenters. At least that is the present status of the affair, according to the story told the Mail this morning.

At Monongahela practically all the outside men of the Stevens Bros., Monongahela Saw and Planing mill and Yohe Bros., are off work.

Brownsville Contractors Get Contract For West Side Work

BEGIN AT THE CENTER

Prepare to Continue Work
Both Towards Bentleyville and Charleroi

Grading has been started on a two-mile stretch of the surveyed route of the West Side Electric Street Railway company's line to be built between Charleroi and Bentleyville. The Parsons Construction company of Brownsville has the contract for two miles of the work, with a time limit of 90 days in which to finish. Track will be laid by the company itself.

Approximately 30,000 square yards of material will have to be removed, and the grading will not be easy. The Parsons Construction company has been advertising for men and teams to put to work at the scene of the grading.

With the two miles completed, there will be left four miles to finish, before the line is completed between Charleroi and Bentleyville. Three miles have been finished at the other end. The Parsons Construction company is beginning at the center of the route and continuing in both directions the extent of distance their contract calls for. On the Bentleyville end the line has been practically finished from Weaver Station to and through Bentleyville.

WHERE THE LAW IS LAME.

While intense public interest is
manifested in the forthcoming coroner's inquest to inquire into the cause of the disastrous Cincinnati
mine explosion it seems to be a foregone conclusion in the minds of many people that the blame will ultimately
be fixed upon someone of the dead employees of the company, which will relieve the latter corporation from responsibility. If this is done the law
as now constituted cannot exact any
penalty from the corporation.

This is where the law is lame.
Miners and subordinate mine officials
with one accord state emphatically
that the action of the mine foreman
and bosses generally is dominated by
the policy of the company. The minor official who is too particular as to
safety, and compels the company to
rigidly obey the law is quite apt to be relieved of his job. The great cry
of all the coal corporations is for production and to keep expenses down.
The larger a mine becomes, and the
more extensive is its production, in
just such proportion do the dangers
increase. In every mine, it is stated, dozens of small details pertaining to
safety are ignored, and the local superintendent who would insist on a
strict observance of everything would
more than likely be set down as not
working for the "interests of the company." The local superintendent
knows this, and so do all his subordinate. Small infractions are ignored until there comes a big disaster. The man whom the company
holds responsible for the enforcement
of the mining regulations invariably
is killed, and there the blame ends.

When the law holds the coal companies personally responsible for all
disasters, there will not be so many of them. If a local superintendent
can feel assured that if he withdraws
all the men from a mine when gas
or danger is detected and keeps them
out until the mine is safe again, without incur the cost of interfering with the production, there would seldom be any great loss of life in explosions
if the explosions occurred at all. In most cases the great disasters are due to the policy of the companies

in giving their output more consideration than the safety of their men.

EAT MUTTON

The manager of the local branch of
the Cudahy Meat Packing company
at Chicago, hands in the following,
which was gleaned from the St. Paul Live Stock Journal this week, and
which is particularly timely just now,
in view of the high price of beef and
the scarcity of cattle:

"Federal inspection of the many
million of sheep and lambs received
at the various marketing centers last
year failed to disclose a single case
of tuberculosis, a circumstance which
constitutes a tremendous argument
in favor of the increased use of this
class of stock as a source of meat
supply for the tables of American

is being placed most strongly upon
the desirability of pure food products
and their necessity to the preservation and betterment of the national health, none should overlook mutton
as affording an opportunity to keep
the meat portion of the bill of fare up to the highest standard of neatfulness.

"With the price of beef and pork
forced to high levels by the scarcity
of cattle and hogs there is reason
to expect an increased consumption
of mutton in American homes. Sheep
growers of this country the past few years have been bending their efforts
toward improving the quality of their
finished product with the result that
today American mutton is as good as
that produced anywhere by the ultimate consumers of the quality."

While peevish things are being re-

PICKED UP IN PASSING

It requires only a cursory glance
at the bills that are before the legislature to convince one that a constitutional revision is an absolute necessity in this state, said a citizen
who keeps close tab on state affairs:
"This is shown by the narrow limits
in which municipalities, townships,
counties, and even the courts are
confined in the matter of regulation.
None of these bodies have the power
under the constitution to act independently and meet any unforeseen
emergency in a practical and common-sense manner.

"For instance, the press dispatches this morning mentions a bill to regulate the use of vehicles other
than automobiles on public highways." Why in the name of commonsense should such a bill be necessary,
when the state maintains a highway department? You don't hear of railroad supervisor sending into the

"So far as state constitution is concerned it makes no special mention of our revenues, passing laws to regulate petty details, which the executive of a department or local official's should decide and look after.
There would be just as much sense in
passing laws regulating the sewing
of a suspender button; fixing May 15 as the date of donning straw hats, prohibiting the wearing of galluses
and a belt at the same time by men;
regulating the widows of women's skirts; prohibiting the use of sausage
in months that do not contain the letter R. Hundreds of laws are passed
at every session of the legislature
regulating details that ought to
come under the jurisdiction of a county, state department, county or municipal officials.

"A big corporation does not conceive of itself with petty details but maintains departments and officials
capable of meeting all such emergencies and deciding them on the spot.
When government is put on a business basis and executed for the exclusive well being of its people, we
will eliminate all this foolishness.
That's why we need a new constitution—one that will permit the state
to do business on business principles."

wonderful form. During the first

the climax by clouting out the only
extra base hit of the day. Brown played with Pittsburgh a short time in the United States league. Phillips had a good opinion of Brown before he signed him. His wisdom of choice is being proved. Score:

Eating in the Fifth Act of Life.
The advice which Sydney Smith gave
to Lord Murray on the subject of diet
was probably sound. "If you wish for
anything like happiness in the fifth act
of life," he wrote, "eat and drink one-
half of what you could eat and drink."
Did I ever tell you my calculations
about eating and drinking? Having ascertained the weight of what I
could live upon so as to preserve
health and strength, and what I did
live upon, I found that between ten
and seventy years of age I had eaten
and drunk forty-four horse wagon
loads of meat and drink more than
would have preserved me in life and
health. The value of this mass of nourishment I considered to be worth $7,000. It occurred to me that I must,
by my voracity, have started to death fully 100 persons. This is a frightful calculation, but irresistible truth.

How a Woman Saved Nice.

It happened in 1808, and is recalled by Mrs. Walter Tibbits in
"Cities Seen in East and West." Nice then under the duces of savoy, was being besieged by Francis I and Bar-
barossa.

and whose great was before her prize. She carried food to the defenders on the ramparts still left. The Turks had put up a scaling ladder
the captain led his party and they were anxious on the parapet. She rushed at the Turkish officer, warned the first he was carrying from him, leapt down the ladder on top of all the soldiers, they threw open a post-hole made a sortie and drove the Turks to the shore.

The Kangaroo at Bay.

When pursued by kangaroos, if possible, direct the animal toward the river.
If he reaches the water, he enters and thanks to his great power, is able to go on foot to a depth where the dogs
are obliged to swim. There he plants
himself on his two hind legs and his
tail, and up to his shoulders in the water, he waits the attack of the dogs.
With his fore paws he seizes by the
head the first dog that approaches him
and, as he is more solidly balanced
than his assailant, he holds the dog's
nose under water as long as he can.
Unless a second dog speedily comes to
the rescue the first one is sure to be drowned. If a companion arrives and
by his attacks on the kangaroo manages to set the captive free the half-
drowned brute is glad to regain the shore as quickly as possible. In this way a strong and courageous male
kangaroo will hold his own against
twenty or thirty dogs, drowning some
and frightening others, and the hunter
is obliged to intervene with a bullet.

Leap and Live Long.

It has been aptly said that there is not the remotest corner of the inlet of
the minute blood vessels of the human body that does not feel some wavelet
from the convulsions occasioned by zod heary laughter. The life prin-ple of the central man is shaken to its innermost depths, sending new ideas of life and strength to the surface, thus
materially tending to insure good health to the persons who indulge
therein. The blood moves more rapidly
and conveys a different impression to
all the organs of the body as it visits
them on that particular mystic journey
when the man is laughing from that conveyed at other times. For this reason every good, hearty laugh in which a person indulges tends to lengthen his life, conveying as it does new and distinct stimulus to the vital forces.

What Wellington Was Doing.

When Sir John Steell, the sculptor
had the Iron Duke sitting for a statue
he tried to induce him to look warlike.
All his efforts were in vain, however.
For Wellington seemed, judging by his
face, never to have heard of Waterloo
or Talavera. At last Sir John lost his patience. "As I am going to make this
statue of your grace," he exclaimed,
"can you not tell me what you were doing before my, the battle of Salamanca? Were you not galloping about
the field, cheering on your men to
deeds of valor by words and action?"
"Bah!" said the duke in evident
scorn. "If you really want to model
me as I was on the morning of Salamanca, then do me crawling along a
ditch on my stomach with a telescope
in my hand!"

Historic Old Hotel.

The Golden Kreuz (Golden Cross) at Regensburg (Ransbon), in Bavaria, is the oldest hotel in Europe. King Ferdinand I, halted at it on his way to
his coronation in 1531, and no other
hotel in Europe possesses records of
such great antiquity as the Golden Cross at Ratisbon does or can boast
of having had so many royal visitors
as have enjoyed its hospitality. The
existing visitors' books, which date
from 1519, contain the names of more than 500 Imperial, royal and princely
personages. The room is shown where
in 1865 the late Prince Bismarck, at
that time Prussian premier, slept when
he came with his sovereign to hold the
conference which was the last attempt
to prevent war between Austria and Prussia. The negotiations were held in the "small hall" of the hotel under
the presidency of King William of Prussia. The host is equally proud of the autographs of Schiller and other
men of letters which he possesses.
The author of "William Tell" wrote the words "Und elue heimath ist er" ("It is indeed a home") in memory of
his stay there, and no landlord could
wish for a better advertisement.—Lon-

Westwood, Md.—"I am a farmer's wife and do most of my own work when I am able. I had nervous spells, female weakness and terrible bearing down pains every month. I also suffered much with my right leg. The doctor started in my back and told me it was organic inflammation. I had to stay in bed from two to four days."

"It is with great pleasure I tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I have followed your directions as near as possible and feel much better than I have felt for years. When I wrote you before I was almost a wreck. You can publish this letter if you like. It may help to strengthen the faith of some poor suffering woman."—Mrs. JOHN F. RICHARD, Westwood, Maryland

Women who suffer from those distressing peculiarities to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

SADDLE MAKING IN MEXICO.

Entire Families Often Take Part in the Trade Industry.

The making of saddles, while in the aggregate an important local Mexican industry, is purely a home affair, the artisans for the most part working independently in their own homes and often pressing the entire family into service. The manager of the largest wholesale and retail dealers in saddles in Mexico City says that all the saddles which they handle are made locally at home by hand and he estimates that more than 100 families in the city are similarly employed.

Many of these handmade saddles are hand-carved and most of them are in appearance, although the leather as a rule is far inferior to that used in American saddles. It is the practice of retailers to furnish the tree, leather and fittings of all kinds to the workmen and pay them for their actual labor. The labor is the cheapest entering into saddle construction, many entire families being satisfied with a wage of 50 cents to $1 American currency per day.

The saddletrees used for the better grade of saddles are imported from the state of Colima, the cheaper grade of saddles using a tree of local make. No American saddles or saddletrees are carried in stock by local merchants, but are ordered from time to time according to the specifications of the individual purchaser. Trade and Consular Reports

A Giant Peppy Saw.

King James I had a gigantic porter eight feet six inches in height, but he was not perfect being round shouldered, knockkneed and lame in one foot. Of a similar height was Charles Munster, a woman of the Hanoverian guard who died in 1676, and seven years before there was being exhibited in London a Dutchman eight feet nine inches high about whom in Peppy's diary we find the following entry on Aug. 13, 1880: "Went to Charing Cross to see the great Dutchman. I did walk under his arm with my hat on and could not reach his chin with the tips of my fingers."

Happiness

If you cannot be happy in one way, be in another, and this facility of disposition is not a little aid from philosophy, for health and good humor are almost the whole affair. Many run about after felicity, like an absent minded man running for his hat while it is in his hand or on his head.

The London Daily.

In humor and wit this is in perfect control of his subject. The London policeman is the nearest possible approach to a perfect specimen of the stranger. It seems the object of all the Londoners. The shopkeepers, the police, the supposed wit and the Hyde park, if the policeman were to come to them or to them, would be either too dumb or too polite. The Hallmark.

"Isn't that Marjorie Mincer, the sou-brette star?"
"Yes."
"But she hasn't a particle of makeup on her face."
"She doesn't wear paint and powder on the street any more for fear she might be mistaken for a society leader."—Life

Undetermined Joke.

"There's a crook gone to the island for ten days that I'll be looking for when he comes out," remarked a policeman on an east side post.

"Why?"

"Well, listen. I caught him trying a door on my beat the other night and took him in. He started to be nasty about it, and I swung my stick at him. Before I could land him one on the head he shouts out to me:

"Don't hit me! Look out! There's a dynamite stick in me pocket!"

"I stopped quick enough, all right, for, you see, I get all the blowing up I need at the station now and again. But listen. When that chap was searched at the station there wasn't a sign of dynamite on him."

"Who was the joke on? Never mind that. The question is, who will the joke be on? Just wait."—New York Globe.

His Method With Tips.

The president of a certain line of coastwise steamers has a novel system of handling the tip evil. He sends on each of his boats every once and so often a detective, who has instructions to go into the dining room, order a large and elaborate repast and hand the waiter a tip of ten cents. If the waiter is silent or sorry after receiving this small gratuity his number is promptly reported. It is said that in no place in the world can such a number of smiling waiters be found as in the dining saloons of this particular steamship line.—New York Tribune.

DISMAL ENGLISHMEN.

Despair Over the State of the Country. Becoming Chronic.

Dr. Forbes Ross, a well-known London physician, says that England is drifting toward the day when the average Englishman will be that of the typical criminal. He believes that the average Englishman of the New York of the future will be that of the average Englishman of the New York of the future. He believes that the average Englishman of the New York of the future will be that of the average Englishman of the New York of the future.

Despair over the state of the country is almost a universal complaint of the English. They are never so happy as when they are talking about themselves. Any one of the English people will show you the English people are going to the devil. The English people are going to the devil. The English people are going to the devil.

ORIENTALS APT PUPILS.

It Doesn't Take Them Long to Get the Swing of Our Ways.

About the time the Japanese or Siamese student at Harvard has come to know his way about the campus he has forgotten to prefix "honorable" to the names of professors, he remembers only dimly that he used to salame to his elders and he wears a cap with as careless grace and comfort as any other freshman.

If six weeks will make such transformation in the oriental six months will so change him that even his father would have difficulty in recognizing him at first glance. And he can say, "You get me, Harold, don't you, old boy?" and "Let's beat it!" as readily as though he were Boston born.

A tutor over in Cambridge takes oriental students in charge as soon as they arrive at the university and instructs them in the ways and means of acquiring a working knowledge of English. It makes no difference whether the youngsters had any education in the English language or not before they left home.

The Chinese or the Japanese student, the tutor says, is invariably quick, determined and eager to learn. Also, according to this tutor, he unlearns a lot of oriental things.—Boston Herald

Parrots and Trees.

There seems to be a species of parrot adapted for each of the more conspicuous kind of trees which are found in tropical forests. Thus, if the tree is a palm which has a single stem and can afford nourishment for a bird only at or near the top of that stem, then the species of parrot that feeds on it is an air bird, capable of flying over the forest in search of such trees. When this is the case the body of the bird is light and the tail long. On the other hand the parrots which inhabit trees with many branches have stout bodies and short tails and are short flighted.

Consolation.

"He said that I was a fool and that my hat was too big for me."
"Cheer up, darling. He was wrong about your hat. It fits you fine."—Chicago Daily News

We Put the "I" in Printing

INNUMERABLE opportunities await the wise man who incorporates brains in his printing.

INDIVIDUALITY can be as well expressed in printed matter as in clothes.

IDEAS that impel attention and improve business are always best presented in good ink work.

IMPORTANT communications imbued with that intangible something which incites interest, initiates investigations, and instigates immediate inquiries, demand immaculate printing.

INK imagination is not an innovation in this print shop. Ideals in illuminative inking and incisive impression are high here, but our imprint does not increase the inexpensiveness of our product.
